Monthly Comment

European markets rebounded in October, outperforming US equities thanks to their lower exposure to AI. The main driver was a sharp rotation away from the AI/Momentum complex. Renewed concerns over AI financing, with neocloud debt falling into distressed territory, and disappointing results from several US tech giants triggered a historic unwinding of Momentum strategies, as investors fled to safety into defensives. Healthcare surged 14% on strong earnings and positive trial data. Conversely, banks slumped by more than 10% as French political risk flared up again: violent riots amid the budget standoff, pushing the OAT-Bund spread to its widest level since 2011. US-Iran tensions kept oil prices elevated, with Brent climbing above $110/bbl amid attacks in the Gulf and reports of possible US strikes after the midterms. The Fed and the ECB both left rates unchanged, with the ECB adopting a slightly dovish tone. Third-quarter earnings remained supportive but did little to dampen the rotation.
In this context, ELEVA Absolute Return Europe was down 1.86% this month.

The long book had a negative impact on performance and underperformed materially the move in relevant indices. Health Care, consumer staples and utilities were the main drivers of performance. Nevertheless, it was not enough to compensate for the negative contribution of financials, industrials and technology.
Outperformers were exclusively defensive stocks. UCB was a standout performer thanks to a material guidance upgrade and a competitor's clinical setback to its drug Bimzelx. Sandoz Group also did well, its Investor Day highlighting significant long-term growth opportunities in biosimilars continued to resonate with investors. Galderma also upgraded its guidance, end markets remain unaffected by the consumption challenges.
Technology and electrification names were sold off despite delivering material guidance upgrades, as financing issues in the AI complex outweighed the positives. ASM International and Prysmian were under pressure. Schneider Electric also announced a poorly timed acquisition and a capital raise to fund it. Banks also were under heavy selling pressure, amid widening credit spreads and poor messaging on net interest margins with intensifying pressure on deposits. UniCredit, Banco Santander, Erste Group Bank and NatWest Group suffered in the month. Civil aerospace names (Rolls-Royce, Safran) underperformed as investors worry that high oil prices will affect aftermarket revenues.
The short book had a negative impact on performance, with index hedges and single name shorts costing performance. Real estate and materials were the positive drivers of short book performance. Nevertheless, it was not enough to compensate for the negative contribution of index hedges, health care and technology.
Leading indicators are starting to turn downwards following a sustained period of improvement. Higher yields, tighter financing conditions and political uncertainties are, in our view, likely to start weighing on economic activity. For now, high nominal growth and improving productivity are supporting earnings. We note that corporates remain active in mergers and acquisitions and share buybacks.
Value and cyclicals on the long book decreased from 47.6% to 43.4% and from 59.9% to 49.6%.
Net exposure decreased from 29.0% to 21.6%, but gross exposure increased from 156.6% to 172.8%.

Since inception, ELEVA Absolute Return Europe is up 51.06%.
